Access to quality healthcare is essential, especially in regional areas such as ours. In recent years Northampton has faced ongoing challenges in attracting and retaining consistent, high-quality health services.

The Shire of Northampton has long recognised this issue and has actively supported local medical practices by providing housing, clinic facilities, transport subsidies and other incentives to ensure the community's healthcare needs are met.

We value the health and wellbeing of our residents and the importance of reliable, accessible medical services. While the responsibility for health service delivery primarily lies with other levels of government, the Shire is stepping in to help address this critical local need.

The introduction of a trial community health service has been established in partnership with the Panaceum Group from Geraldton. This service will operate 5 days per week once up and running for a one-year trial period, delivering general medical care to the Northampton community. This initiative's financial sustainability relies on your wholehearted and ongoing support. If the service is not used by a significant number of local residents, it will not continue beyond the initial trial period.

We urge all residents to take full advantage of this opportunity. Your support is critical to the success and continuation of quality health care in Northampton.

Let's work together to build a healthier, more resilient community.
